LOCATION

You'll be just a stone's throw from the Kings Cross Estate, London's most successful regeneration project in recent times. It's home to the new Google campus, Central St. Martins and Coal Drops Yard.

Iconic architecture, canal-side eateries and boutique retailers combine to make this one of London's cultural hotspots.

DESCRIPTION

The property is a warehouse-style office arranged over split-level ground floors.

The space benefits from iron columns and other original industrial features. There is a generous floor-to-ceiling height of up to 3.4m, and a dual aspect means the main space is bright and airy.

There is a secluded external courtyard to the rear held by way of a separate freehold title.

The garden floor is currently self-contained, making the space flexible and presenting the opportunity for separate leasing.
